Projected CSU enrollment figures disputed

By Brian Wright
Daily staff writer

No one seems to agree on the number of students expected to attend the California State University system in the next 15 years.

The disagreement between the CSU, the California Postsecondary Education Commission (CPEC) and the state Department of Finance is not whether student enrollment is growing, but by how much.

Each organization has different predictions for student enrollment in the next 15 years, and that will affect how much money is budgeted to the CSU system.

CSU estimates 180,000 new students in 15 years, while CPEC projects 110,000 and Dept. of Finance figures foretell an even lower enrollment of 105,000 students. Differences in the projected amounts are largely due to the estimated enrollment figures for minorities.

CSU spokesperson Anne Ambrose said, "CSU anticipates minority students would participate or enroll in universities at the same rate as whites."

Bruce Hamlett of CPEC does not see an equal enrollment percentage among minorities, however. He said current eligibility among white high school graduates for acceptance into a CSU campus is 32 percent, compared to 13 percent for Hispanics and 10 percent for blacks.

He said CSU assumes minorities will achieve the same levels as whites in five years. "We (CPEC) don't see that. There is no evidence..."

The evidence Hamlett said is lacking a greater momentum of growing minority enrollment.

Total enrollment percentages here, obtained from the Institutional Research Department of SJSU, for 1989 show that almost 38 percent of all students at SJSU are minorities.

Minority students have steadily increased enrollment at SJSU, while the percentage of whites have likewise decreased since 1984, the base year used by Institutional Research in its latest report.

Trustees mum after 7 hours

By Rob Neill
Daily staff writer

LONG BEACH — CSU trustees spent the first seven hours of their board meeting in closed session Tuesday discussing matters that its chairwoman would not comment on.

Chairwoman Maranthi Lansdale said, "I have absolutely no comment" on why we were in the closed session. Lansdale said the announcement about what was discussed would come at 1:30 p.m. today.

A CSU staff consultant who declined to give his name said, "They shouldn't be talking so long. They're probably rehearsing their speech on the pay raise for tomorrow."

Lansdale and other top CSU officials came under fire earlier this year after university administrators had been given raises of up to 43 percent in a closed session.

Five separate committees had been scheduled to meet Tuesday, but only the trustees' committee on Campus Planning, Buildings and Grounds was able to meet. Among the new additions to the CSU system will be parking garages for California State universities Sacramento and Northridge.

Because of the approval, SJSU President Gail Fullerton said she was optimistic about SJSU's chances for a new facility.

"These garages they received today have been worked on for a number of years. We're beginning to submit a proposal for a parking facility at South Campus," Fullerton said.

It would probably be a five-year plan similar to the other universities, Fullerton said. Getting approval for the facilities was easier for those universities because they had space on which to build, Fullerton added.

"We're landlocked. South Campus is our only possibility," Fullerton said.

Prof gives up rights to book

SJSU administration's decision still pending

By Lawrence J. Salisbury
Daily staff writer

An SJSU instructor has surrendered the copyright to a novel published in his name after he was accused of stealing the story from a local author.

Craig Strete, an associate professor of English, gave up the rights to "Death in the Spirit House" after author Ron Montana, 45, threatened to sue the book's publisher, Doubleday Foundation.

Strete offered no comment. According to a contract signed by Montana, who attended Foothill Community College, and the publisher, the copyright now names Montana as sole author and exclusive owner of all subsidiary rights of the book and agrees to pay him royalties from the first edition.

It will also publish a paperback edition with Montana listed as author. In return, Montana agreed not to continue with the lawsuit against Doubleday.

"I'm satisfied with the agreement. It was exactly what I wanted," Montana said.

Administration officials are investigating the matter but haven't yet all the evidence necessary for a fair decision, said Dan Buerger, assistant to the president.

"Depending on the nature of what is proven, there is a whole gamut of possibilities," Buerger said.

It's unclear whether Doubleday had Strete's agreement before changing the copyright. Katherine Trager, a lawyer for Doubleday, declined to comment on the matter.

"These things vary from case-to-case, there's really no way to tell without a lot more information," said Professor Goldstein, a copyright expert at Stanford University.

Montana first became aware of Strete's publication during a conference at the Red Lion in San Jose. One of his colleagues showed him a book review about "Death in the Spirit House."

"He came up to me and said, 'Hey Ron, isn't this your book?', and sure enough it was. I'd read it at conferences in the past and luckily he recognized it," Montana said.

About five years ago, Montana had sent a copy of the novel to Doubleday and also Strete, at Strete's request. He heard nothing more from either until the book was published under Strete's name in 1988.

Montana said that Doubleday admitted knowing of his connec-

A.S. election planned to fill two vacant spots

By Harry Mok
Daily staff writer

Two positions on the Associated Students Board of Directors left vacant by resignations will remain empty until elections later this month.

A.S. President Scott Santandrea said the two to fill the positions now would be "useless" with elections two weeks away.

"The board has existed without them," he said. "They were not vital positions."

The open positions are director of community affairs and director of sponsored programs.

Elections March 28 and 29

Whoever wins the open spots in elections March 28 and 29 would be appointed immediately, according to Santandrea, who as president makes recommendations for appointments to the board for approval.

At the board's first meeting of the semester Jan. 31, four members announced their resignations.

Resigning were Gabriel Miramontes, director of business affairs; Tim Morley, director of sponsored programs, Jeff Realini, director of personnel and Beckie Six, director of community affairs.

More than 12 applicants have expressed interest in the open spots, according to Santandrea.

"At this point with the elections so close, making appointments would obviously be favoring somebody," said Cindy Resler, who was appointed A.S. director of personnel in February.

Jim Cilley was appointed director of business affairs, also in February.

Resler said that some of the applicants for the vacant positions will definitely be running in the elections.

"We don't want to help or hurt anyone that would be running," Santandrea said.

The director of community affairs works with groups such as the residence halls and Greeks on campus as well as the San Jose City Council in the community, according to Santandrea.

The director of sponsored programs is vice chair of the special allocations committee, is a member of the budget committee and a member of the A.S. program board of directors.

Santandrea said that the main problem would have been the budget committee, but a designee was appointed to fill the position.

"If someone were appointed now they would be totally unfamiliar with the budget."

Duties on the program board have been taken over by Santandrea, who was director of sponsored programs last year.

Campus salutes its political era

By Denise Reynolds
Daily staff writer

In celebration of the Student Union's 20th Anniversary, politically active SJSU students from the 1960s will participate in a forum Thursday called "Politics, Society, and the University: A '60s Retrospective."

During the late '60s and early '70s, SJSU was the center of political activity across the nation. According to Louis Barozzi, counselor at SJSU, in the spring of 1970, the Student Union "became the headquarters for students all over the country."

Those students who were active on campus during this tumultuous period, such as past Associated Students presidents, members of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), and other student political activists were invited to the forum which will focus on the events of the '60s from the viewpoint of today.

Scheduled to speak are:

- Dick Miner, A.S. president from 1968-69, who was involved in implementing greater student representation on campus, campaigning with the slogan, "No bullshit and full partnership for students."

- Rashid Salahuddin formerly known as James Edwards, A.S. president from 1969-70, who was elected in a controversial election in which more than 6,000 students voted.

- Ken Noel, graduate student active in black athletic issues on campus when SJSU was a cauldron of black athletic concerns.

- Richard Ferry, SDS member, who involved in the demonstration in 1967 against Dow Chemical, maker of Napalm, an incendiary bomb used during the Vietnam War.

- Phil Whitten, Gene Lockey and Stephanie Dean who were student activists during the '60s.

- John Hendricks, who was the A.S. president from 1964-65.

- Cynthia Johnson and Gil Villagren, who were active in SDS and student government.

- Frank Sweeney, who was the news editor of the Spartan Daily in the late '60s and now works as a staff reporter for the San Jose Mercury News.

According to Miner, the forum is an excellent opportunity for students to get a better understanding of how dramatically the world has changed, to "take a look at the world in a different perspective."

The retrospective forum will take place in the Student Union Umunhum Room from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Thursday.

Deserving more than excuses

After years of paying increased Student Union fees, one SJSU alumnus found that the Event Center time he was promised was running out.

Last fall, the Student Union Board of Directors made the decision to start compensation time for graduated SJSU students immediately after the opening of the Event Center. Unfortunately, the board forgot to mention its decision to the 23,000 alumni who helped pay for the mismanaged monster.

At the opening of the Event Center, alumni were informed that the center was finally completed. A brochure sent by the opening committee informed them about the center's features, and said that the graduates were entitled to a semester of free use for every semester they paid into the Event Center. What was not mentioned in the brochure was that the time started immediately.

"Maybe it was just an oversight," is the explanation given by the Student Union public relations director, Judy Hermann.

SJSU alumni deserve more than such excuses for the years they spent paying for the building. They should be entitled to start their time when they choose.

SUBOD says it made the decision to start the comp time all at once to save admissions and records paperwork. This rationale does not make sense. In order to sign up for a membership card, graduates still have to have admissions and records verify that they were enrolled and figure the number of semesters they paid into the center.

The directors also said they didn't want former students to show up 10 years from now to sign up to use the facility.

The alumni deserve to start the time when it is convenient for them. After all, the center should have been completed long before it was finally opened, when many of the graduates were still in school.

If the board objects to students coming back too late, they should set a time limit. Why not say the students may sign up anytime within five years of their graduation date, and then send out notification to the eligible graduates?

If the board of directors refuses to change or modify its decision, it should at least correct the error it made in not informing graduates of workout time that is slipping away.

Victorville (Calif.) Daily Press on Sen. Alan Cranston

Sen. Alan Cranston, the Sierra Club's creature, keeps making noises about how he's not only not going to resign, but plans on seeking yet another six-year term. Were he re-elected, which he won't be, he would have been a member of the Senate for nearly a quarter of a century.

Cranston, of course, is but the latest example of why we'd all be better off if United States senators were limited to a maximum of two terms, and congressmen to a maximum of six — thus limiting the membership in both chambers to a maximum of 12 years of "public service." Even 12 years in some cases — Cranston again comes to mind — is too long.

Cranston has become damaged goods, and will soon be dumped. It's too bad, in a way. We'd started to develop a certain affection for the old fraud.

Films should offer more than oblivion

REPORTERS' FORUM

BY ADAM STEINHAUER

The studios tend to avoid films with true and unhappy stories like 'Romero,' no matter how valuable their messages are made them, unknown and unseen by the rest of the world.

It is the obvious result as the "Escape to the movies" slogan is taken to an extreme.

The studios tend to avoid films with true and unhappy stories like "Romero," no matter how valuable their messages are.

I wouldn't deny that escapist movies have a certain value.

"Romero," although it was an incredibly well made movie, was sometimes painful to watch. Most evenings, I would rather see something more like "Who Framed Roger Rabbit."

But "escapism," defined as "a tendency to escape from reality," is barely that anymore. Television has shown so many unrealistic and overly simplistic images of life that many of them have become more real to us than reality.

Occasionally, an important movie will escape death on the studios' door steps to set us straight.

After years of "M.A.S.H." and a season of "China Beach," "Born on the Fourth of July" may have shown us the first realistic image of a military medical unit at work after a battle.

The scene should be required viewing for anyone who has never actually been to war.

Other movies like "Cry Freedom" and "Do the Right Thing" occasionally come along to make people think about important issues.

But most of the time, film cooperates with television to give the people what they want — comfortable ignorance.

Somebody's bad day can only get better

REPORTERS' FORUM

BY JAMIE PITTS

Thinking about what she said usually helps, but sometimes there are days when no amount of comfort will help.

cocktails because there were only two cocktail servers when I got there.

The only thing to do was to dive in and forget about the rest of the day.

For a split second I thought the day was going to get better. A salesman at the first table I went to told me I was the prettiest cocktail waitress in the bar and to come back to his table.

But later I realized that there were only male managers serving drinks on that side of the bar. So basically I was the prettiest out of all of the females, and I was all of the females. Not bad odds.

Thanks, I think.

Skateboarders have rights too

Editor,

Yes, I hate the bike policy and think it's a bunch of B.S. Yes, I also applaud all the efforts that are being made right now to make it more reasonable. But I would like to take a few minutes to voice my opinion on the most overlooked part of the new bike/skateboard law.

I'm talking about the ban of all skateboards, roller skates and unicycles from the entire campus. I think it's prejudice. The people in the administration have some preconceived idea that all people that use skateboards are long-haired, anarchist surfers that cut class.

Well, we're not. And even if we were, the administration has no right to say one life style is better than the another. Besides, we must have gotten into college somehow.

I've been informed that SJSU President Gail Fullerton will not even consider any concessions regarding the policy. Well, I would like to say that skateboards cause less damage than bicycles and should be given at least equal rights.

Better understanding needed

Editor,

I would like to clear up some statements in the Spartan Daily regarding the article on Date Rape. Either the reporter was in a rush, I was in a rush or we were both unclear.

First: We have to create a world that makes it all right for women to say yes to sex when they would like to have sex without calling them "sluts." As long as women are slandered for seeming to enjoy sex, we put them in a position that makes it necessary to say no even if they don't mean it.

Second: Men have to accept NO as NO. They cannot continue to pressure and manipulate women into having sex under the excuse that women really mean yes when they say no.

Third: We need to educate both men and women about the difference between wanted and unwanted sex and make it clear that it is against the law to coerce, manipulate or force anyone to have sex against their will.

And finally, we have to make it clear to everyone on the campus that we will not tolerate anyone being abused into sexual acts against their will.

I hope this clears up my points.

Players concerned about fans

Editor,

This is in response to Jill McLaughlin's idiotic and unsubstantiated column that appeared in the March 12 issue of the Daily.

Where has Miss McLaughlin been? Please watch the sports networks, honey. ESPN has interviewed many players and their main concerns are the fans.

Miss McLaughlin can't "think of any other field that starts at $105,000." But I ask you, Miss McLaughlin, how much would you expect to be paid if you answered an ad like this:

WANTED! People who like to fly at 3 a.m. across North America, must be willing to show up to work three hours early, then must stay after work two or three hours to explain why you did your work well or answer questions why you didn't do your work well, must be willing to put up with loud-mouthed people and drunk men yelling obscenities at you.

As far as being "paid for sitting on the bench," I wonder if you would expect to be paid if a better writer took your starting spot?

It is not all right for ballplayers to "be awarded more money than their starting salary within 2 years." But Miss McLaughlin, how early do other employees seek a raise? About every 6 months! But since they play pro ball, they should wait 4 to 6 times as long to receive a raise? That is nonsense.

How come you only implicate the players and not the owners? If you were making millions of dollars would you squabble over $15,000? If they love the game and the fans, they would pay the 3 or 4 players that would get the extra money.

"The players want to be rewarded no matter how they play," writes Miss McLaughlin. Do you understand what arbitration means? It rewards the deserving players and settles with the non-deserving.

I would rather watch the "fat, lethargic" ballplayers than read a hypocritical, no facts using writer.

If owners fire the major leaguers and hire minor league players like Miss McLaughlin proposes, who will watch these players? Not me and certainly not "the millions of the faithful."

Proof? How many people showed up for the pro football "replacement" games? Oh yeah, Jill McLaughlin did!

Hey hold on, who's that riding that Greyhound bus?

Oh, I should have known it was her!

Military not always necessary

Editor,

The front page photo bore an unfortunate resemblance to scenes from the movie "Glory." Your use of the military's own advertising slogan "... It's an adventure" was tasteless, at best. And while you forgot to get the flag and a piece of the pie into the photo spread, at least you got "Mom."

Is the Spartan Daily in the business of recruiting for the military?

War may sometimes be necessary, and joining the ROTC may sometimes be the only way students can get financial help with school, but we need not glorify either one.

Ask any veteran who's seen military action. He or she will tell you what kind of adventure a military career is. It's an adventure in death.

For The Record

In a story dealing with a stabbing at William Street Park that appeared in the March 12 issue of the Daily, a photo caption incorrectly reported that one person died. There were no deaths. Also, the headline should have stated that three men were stabbed in the fight. Huey Tan Nguyen, 18, was arraigned Monday on three counts of assault with a deadly weapon. Three others were released without charges.

Body of dead man found near railroad

By Tamara Thompson
Daily staff writer

The body of a man, who was shot in the head and then run over by a vehicle, was found Friday morning by a resident on Forestdale Avenue, San Jose Police officials said.

The Santa Clara County coroner's office confirmed Monday that the still-unidentified man died from the gunshot wound, but it is not known where the man died.

There are no suspects in the slaying, and it is also not known who later ran over the body.

The corpse was discovered about 7:30 a.m. near train tracks behind an apartment complex at 729 Forestdale Ave.

The body was that of a Latino man, between the ages of 30 and 35. He had black hair which was medium length, a mustache and a stocky build.

He was found wearing a light blue, button-down shirt, a light green jacket, jeans and new black tennis shoes.

Anyone with information about identity of the man or how he met his death should call homicide investigators Sgt. Dave Harrison or Officer Santiago Trejo at 277-5283.

SJSU Today

SJSU's annual spring blood drive is under way and blood donations are being accepted until Thursday in the Loma Prieta room of the Student Union.

A free cholesterol screening is available with each donation and donors will also receive a free T-shirt commemorating the drive.

The hours to donate blood are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This year's drive is sponsored by the Arnold Air Society and the Phi Gamma Delta (FIJI) fraternity.

For more information about the drive, call the Stanford University blood bank, which is coordinating the event, at (415) 723-7831.

Because many students are not on campus every day, YesterDaily provides readers with a recap of the previous day's top stories.

Kenneth Blase has sealed an accreditation report on the SJSU journalism department. Accreditation is the process in which a department is certified to have met certain criteria set by a national governing body.

Joe Schoequist, a member of the accreditation committee, said the team's report would be made publicly available at the national accreditation committee, scheduled for April 1 in Chicago. The decision to confer accreditation will be made then, he said.

MEChA is hosting the ninth annual Raza Day Monday, March 26 in an effort to reaffirm the commitment of Chicano and Latino students at SJSU. Raza Day, an event for high school students, will include films, seminars, competitions and many activities to increase student's understanding of the benefits higher education can provide.

More than 30 men and women marched across campus from the Student Union Amphitheatre Thursday night to protest women's lack of safety at night. Carrying signs that read "Stop violence against women," the protesters marched through the residence halls and around campus for less than an hour.

The SJSU men's tennis team lost to UCSC for the first time in history Friday in a non-league match at Santa Cruz. Although they lost, SJSU won its Numbers one and two singles matches. Number one Mike Chincholo beat Steve Gottleib, 7-6, 6-1 and Number two Brian Eagle beat Kirk Edwards 6-4, 6-2.

Santa Barbara sweep puts Spartans into first

By Edwin Acevedo
Daily staff writer

The women's softball team took over sole possession of first place in the Big West conference by sweeping a double header from UC-Santa Barbara and improving its record to 4-0. SJSU is 8-5 overall.

The Spartans won the first game 3-0 by scoring two runs in the second inning and another in the sixth to beat the Gauchos Saturday.

The second game of the doubleheader took eight innings to complete, but the Spartans still came out on top 3-2.

However the SJSU's toughest task is still to come.

Next up for the Spartans is Fresno State which is ranked second nationally. The double header against the Bulldogs starts 6 p.m. Wednesday at Police Association League (P.A.L.) Stadium.

Half of the teams in the Big West conference are ranked in the top 20 of the nation, which makes things tough on the Spartans.

SJSU Coach Kathy Strahan said it won't take much to motivate her players against Fresno State since most of her players come from the Fresno/Madera area.

"They're really pumped to go down there and get them," Strahan said. "I won't have to do much to get them fired up."

The Spartans are on a roll as well.

In SJSU's second game against UC-Santa Barbara on Saturday the score was tied after seven innings, but the Spartans moved ahead in the top of the eighth.

Darcy Stapley singled to open the inning and stole second. After two outs, Janice Richner singled Stapley home with the winning run.

Lisa Wehren picked up the win after pitching seven innings, and Mitzi Zenger finished off the Bulldogs with a scoreless eighth.

In the first game, the Spartans loaded the bases in the second inning. Tiffany Cornelius hit a flyball to the outfield, but the runner was called out at the plate.

The UC-Santa Barbara catcher tried to catch Roz Rios, who was trying to advance to third, but the ball went off the third baseman and into an open dugout, allowing Rios to score.

SJSU Leann Emery threw seven scoreless innings for the win.

Former SJSU coach House finds a new home at Reno

By Edwin Acevedo
Daily staff writer

When outside linebacker coach Jim House was told he would be released from the football team last January, his financial situation appeared bleak. Without a steady job, it was going to be hard to make further payments on his San Jose home.

Fortunately for House, Athletic Director Randy Hoffman saw to it that he didn't lose his home. Hoffman and SJSU President Gail Fullerton saw to it that House was never released from the football team, at least until March 1. He told House that there would be work for him at SJSU until Dec. 31 or until he found a job, whichever came first.

The job came first. Monday, House began his position as defensive line coach at the University of Nevada, Reno.

Never officially released

"He was never officially released from the university," Hoffman said. "There was a misunderstanding."

House said it shouldn't take too long to learn the Wolf Pack's system, but he misses his players on the Spartan football team.

"I miss those guys, but (football) was there before I got there and it will be there after they leave," he said. "Football is bigger than me or the university."

"I have nothing but good things to say about the university," he added. "I had three good years, we won a lot of games and we had a lot of good players."

'It just didn't work out'

House said he and defensive back coach Herman Edwards were asked by Coach Claude Gilbert to resign effective Jan. 26.

Edwards took the opportunity to move up to the professional ranks, landing a job with the Kansas City Chiefs. He works with the secondary and is one of their pro scouts as well.

House, however, couldn't just resign. He said he hadn't had time to look for a job and needed money to make house payments. He wouldn't qualify for unemployment unless he was terminated.

"The thing that hurt the most was that I was fired after going to the National Convention (of football coaches)," he said. "So instead of looking for a job there, I was buying video equipment."

Gilbert "said we both did a good job as coaches but it was just a chemistry thing," House said. "I respect the man for that. It just didn't work out, I don't want to make it ugly."

House's firing was something that members of the football team didn't talk about openly. Kelly Liebengood, who played outside linebacker for House, said no one on the team wants to start any controversy with spring training starting this month.

"It's a touchy subject," Liebengood said. "He's a good friend."

New position challenging

Fullerton and Hoffman let House stay on as the linebackers' coach until March 1. If he hadn't found a job at that point, Hoffman would give him a position in the athletic staff until Dec. 31.

Hoffman "wouldn't even let Gilbert hire a coach until I found a job," House said.

Before House had the chance to accept Hoffman's offer, Nevada Reno's head football Coach Chris Ault hired him to his staff last week.

"It's going to be a real challenge," House said. "I can't wait to start spring training. I'm really thankful for the job."

He'll still root for Spartans

He is still a little upset about being fired, mostly with its timing. He said it all worked out for the best, though.

"I could say things but it would be spilled milk," House said. "The university has been real good to me."

"He's a nice guy," Liebengood said. "He doesn't want to offend anyone."

"I know he's pissed off right now. He's the kind of guy that if he offended the coaches it would be like offending the players and he likes the players so much that I don't think he'd do that."

Although House is not part of SJSU anymore, he said he would still root for the football team.

"I wish the Spartans good luck. You can tell them I'll be watching them."

'I miss those guys, but (football) was there before I got there and it will be there after they leave.'

Spartans beat Cal

By Randy Robertson
Daily staff writer

BERKELEY—Nine Spartans had at least one hit, and Dave Tellers pitched a complete game to lead SJSU to 10-1 win over Cal on Tuesday.

The Spartans scored eight runs in the first three innings to take control of the game early. Still, Spartan coach Sam Piraro was not comfortable.

"This ballpark gives me the 'heebie jeebies,'" Piraro said.

Piraro recalled playing at Cal in 1972 and losing a game after leading 9-0. Tuesday though, Tellers held Cal scoreless until the ninth inning.

Six of the first eight Cal outs were via strikeouts by Tellers (5-1). He ended the game with eight strikeouts and allowed eight hits.

"I got away with a few pitches today," Tellers said. "I had to go to a few other pitches today to get the job done."

Left fielder Eric Booker was the only Spartan to fail to hit safely, ending his 11-game hitting streak. Booker did reach base safely four times with three walks and was hit by a pitch.

The Spartans scored five runs in the third inning to break the game open. SJSU second baseman Mike Gonzales hit a bouncer to third and Cal third baseman Chris Saunders threw wildly past first. The play allowed three Spartan runners to score.

Spartan Spaniard

Irizar decides to leave home and compete for Spartans

By Michael Moeller

Daily staff writer

"It had been a dream for a long time for me to come to the United States, and now, it has finally happened."

Miguel Irizar, a dark-haired, bushy-eyebrowed 20-year-old, left his home of Bilbao, Spain last summer to compete as a gymnast in the United States.

"Last May, I had a choice to make. Either I had to join up with the Spanish National Team full-time or quit altogether," Irizar said through a thick accent.

"It was then that I chose to come to the United States. Some of the schools that I mailed my information to called me back, but in the end, Doug (Van Everen) was with me and I chose SJSU," Irizar said.

"I first heard about Miguel through the mail, I knew that he was a good gymnast because of the skills he was working on and from his scores," SJSU head coach Doug Van Everen said.

"It was hard at first because Miguel could barely speak any English and I didn't know if he understood what I was saying at all. When he got here I had no idea what he looked like, Miguel was one of the last people through customs and he looked like a gymnast," Van Everen said.

In his first year at SJSU, Irizar has played a key role for the Spartans. For the first time in school history, the men's gymnastics team has a chance to qualify for the regional competition.

Irizar has lead the team on the parallel bars and has been real consistent on the floor this season, Van Everen said.

"He has a lot of natural talent, but he doesn't know how good he really is," said team member Andy Tate.

"Sometimes it hurts him at meets because he will see a lot of guys doing stuff and won't realize that he is that good as well," Tate said.

"He will be an All-American on several events before he is finished here," Van Everen said. "He has to be one of the most gifted athletes that I have ever coached."

"Most of his routines are totally untapped and he has the skill and the ability to learn new tricks and routines really well," Van Everen added.

Irizar began competing in gymnastics at the age of seven, but didn't begin getting serious about it until he was 14.

"No one in my family ever tried gymnastics but me," Irizar said. When I was small, I would stand on my head and go to the gym to watch people swing around. I finally got serious by the time I was 14. When I was 16, I made the National Team.

That was weird because I was the youngest and the smallest person there," Irizar said. "My coaches wanted me to go to either Madrid or Barcelona to practice full-time," he said.

Participating on the national team did not appeal to Irizar.

"I didn't want to do that for the National Team, because if you get hurt or begin to do poorly, the coaches don't care and they will bring in someone new to replace you," he said.

During the last two years Irizar spent in Spain, he traveled between Barcelona and Bilbao, where he lived. The first 15 days of the month would be spent in Barcelona and the rest of the month Irizar would spend with his family.

Irizar took part in the National Team inter-squad competition in May 1989, finishing fourth in the country. It was then that he was given a choice by the coaches, either join the team on a full-time basis or quit.

"The coaches expect you to work all day," Irizar said. "We used to have seven-hour practices, there was no time for anything else. I got really tired of it."

I like the coaching better here in the U.S. because it seems like you get more out of practice in a shorter amount of time. I have really learned a lot since I came here," he said.

Irizar said that when he announced the decision to leave Spain, everyone was shocked and upset.

"My coach was really mad and my parents weren't too happy either," Irizar said. "But after we sat down and talked about it, they agreed that it was the best thing for me to do. My friends told me that I was crazy to come here and live for five years not knowing anybody."

Irizar said adjusting to a foreign land was not easy.

"It was tough at first because I didn't know any English. During the first month I was here, I took an English course to help me learn. It was a funny class because the teacher would ask me something and all I knew how to say to her was 'yes.' Now, though, I am better at grammar and I have caught on to American jokes," Irizar said.

Kwamme Torres, who is a teammate of Irizar's, said, "Irizar is a great person, his attitude is the best."

Soviets approve a new measure on presidency

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Congress of People's Deputies Tuesday approved Mikhail S. Gorbachev's plan for a strong presidency, a post the Soviet leader says is essential to hold the country together as his reforms go forward.

The Congress, the country's top legislative body, also scrapped the clauses of the Constitution that guarantee the Communist Party's leading role in society, which would create a multiparty system. It also legalized private ownership of factories.

"We are standing before the greatest, most meaningful step in the history of our government," Gorbachev told the parliament.

Later Tuesday, the deputies were expected to decide whether they would nominate and elect Gorbachev to a four-year term as president.

It is expected that after that term, the term would be five years and the president would be popularly elected.

The lawmakers approved the measure on the presidency by a vote of 1,817 to 133, with 61 abstentions, the official Tass news agency said. A two-thirds majority of the 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies was required for the motion to pass.

Delegates applauded when the bill passed.

Multiparty system part of new plan

The measures on the presidency, private property and scrapping the leading role of the party had earlier been approved by the Supreme Soviet, the smaller parliament that handles day-to-day business.

The measure on scrapping the party's leading role passed by a vote of 1,771 to 164, with 74 abstentions.

Gorbachev had argued that the more powerful presidency was needed to keep the Soviet Union intact as he presses ahead with his reforms and faces crises of a crumbling economy and growing independence movements.

Lithuanians had been so dismayed by the proposal on the more powerful presidency that they rushed to declare independence on Sunday, before it passed. Estonia, Latvia and Georgia have all taken moves in that direction.

Gorbachev's victory on the proposal came despite a boycott by a group of progressive deputies worried about placing too much power in the hands of one person in a country with a history of dictatorship.

The vote on the presidency bill also was boycotted by representatives of several independence-minded republics, who said the president would be too strong for the loose federation of independent nations they see as the future Soviet Union.

Abstaining had the same effect as voting no, because Gorbachev was struggling to put together the two-thirds majority needed for constitutional amendments.

To succeed today, Gorbachev backed off some demands that had disturbed legislators from some republics, who felt he would have too much power. Those demands included the president's right to declare on his own a state of emergency and to suspend the parliaments of the republics.

The presidency bill creates a chief executive who can propose legislation, veto laws passed by the Supreme Soviet legislature, declare war or martial law, and overrule cabinet members. Vice President Anatoly Lukyanov said Monday it also clearly separates executive and legislative powers for the first time.

The historic change in Article 6 of the Soviet Constitution drops language defining the Communist Party as the "leading and guiding force of Soviet society and the nucleus of its political system, of all state organizations and public organizations."

President makes bargain on taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush declared Tuesday he is "prepared to negotiate" with congressional Democrats for a comprehensive package to cut the federal deficit, but insisted he won't abandon his opposition to tax increases.

Bush praised Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., for making a "very broad proposal" in coming out with a far-reaching package that would include both higher taxes and a freeze on Social Security.

The administration surprised some Democratic lawmakers Monday by being unexpectedly receptive to the proposal by the Democratic chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"I was, in being receptive, somewhat colored by the way in which chairman Rostenkowski approached this, the evident good will on his part to break the ice and move the process forward," Bush said today.

Congressional Democrats had welcomed the White House's conciliatory words about Rostenkowski's dramatic deficit reduction plan while claiming outright administration support is what is really needed—something they didn't get from Bush.

The president told a news conference in the White House briefing room he would not embrace Rostenkowski's plan for new taxes. "I'm not for a tax increase," he said, adding that there were many other parts of the Rostenkowski package he also did not support.

Asked if he could assure the American people that taxes would not be raised as part of a deficit-reduction scheme, Bush said: "I'm only one player. But you know my position. I have no intention of changing that position."

tion with the novel but still published it under Strete's name.

In a case of "innocent infringement", a publishing company is not liable for damages if it was unaware that the book was not published under the name of the original author.

"My agent had contacted Doubleday and asked them about it before they published it. I don't know why they published it anyway," Montana said.

After the book was published, Montana showed Doubleday his original manuscript and they said that they would take care of the problem.

"They didn't tell me much. Maybe they threatened to sue him (Strete). I really don't know," Montana said. "All I know is that it wasn't his to have in the first place."

Trager also declined to comment on what would happen to the money Strete has already received.

According to Locus Magazine, the reprint is scheduled for August of 1990.

"Death in the Spirit House", whose subject is the American Indian, is Montana's sixth book.

Mayor admits dependence on drug, alcohol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry Tuesday publicly acknowledged a "chemical dependency" to alcohol and two prescription drugs, but said he won't resign while fighting federal cocaine and perjury charges.

"I'm back. I feel good about myself," the mayor said in his first extended public appearance since being charged and leaving the city for substance abuse treatment in Florida and South Carolina.

Barry read a lengthy statement that made no mention of cocaine. Nor did he say directly whether he intends to seek a fourth term as mayor.

Barry said he was diagnosed at a Florida treatment center as being dependent on alcohol, Valium and Xanax. Valium and Xanax are both commonly prescribed to treat anxiety.

Poindexter knew, North says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North testified Tuesday at John Poindexter's trial that "I did keep the admiral apprised" of North's work on a secret November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran.

North's statement undermined the efforts of Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, to show that the former national security adviser wasn't involved in the project.

Poindexter is accused of obstructing Congress and making false statements when he told Congress a year after the Hawk missiles were sent to Iran that he recalled finding out about the delivery only after it occurred.

Woman takes Haitian presidency

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Supreme Court Judge Ertha Pascal-Trouillot Tuesday became the first woman president of Haiti in the Caribbean nation's tumultuous 186-year history.

Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot was inaugurated a day after military leader Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, pressured by widespread protests, resigned and left the country.

Trade deficit smallest in 5 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. trade declined to $105.89 billion last year, the smallest in five years, the government said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said that the current account deficit shrank 16.3 percent from a $126.55 billion imbalance in 1988.

Bush lifts Nicaraguan trade embargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush Tuesday lifted a five-year trade embargo against Nicaragua and asked Congress to provide $300 million to help speed the transition to democracy. He directed his defense secretary to provide funds from Pentagon budget reductions.

Bush also renewed his call for $500 million in assistance to Panama and said both Central American nations "need our help to heal deep wounds."

Bush called for creation of a "Fund for Democracy" to assist the two nations. He urged Congress to speed the aid on its way and to join the administration in identifying Pentagon programs that would absorb the needed reductions.

Bush also responded with a blunt "no" when asked whether he would freeze Social Security benefits or raise taxes to eliminate the federal deficit. A senior House Democrat made such proposals last week-end as part of a comprehensive deficit-cutting plan.

Bush said his administration had an encouraging response to the plan by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., because it showed "evident goodwill."

"There's a lot of things that I'm not for that are in his proposal. A lot including taxes," the president said.

Asked if the administration would recognize a drive for independence by the Soviet Republic of Lithuania, Bush said, "We want to see the evolution of the control of the territory there."

The president opened his news conference with the announcement that he had signed an order lifting the five-year trade embargo that former President Reagan had imposed against the Sandinista government of Daniel Ortega.

Ortega was defeated last month by opposition candidate Violeta Chamorro. Ortega told Vice President Dan Quayle in Chile on Monday that he would abide by the results of the elections and permit an orderly transition to democracy in Nicaragua.

Bush called Nicaragua President Violeta Chamorro on Monday to brief her about the aid package, a source said.

The president paid tribute to the extraordinary worldwide move toward democracy in 1989, and said the drive for freedom "leaves us with a new challenge, how best to support newborn democracies."

Bush said the Soviet Union had not requested direct U.S. aid and he criticized House Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., for proposing such assistance.

Asked for a reaction to Gephardt's criticism of him, Bush said, "I don't want to knock the man. Maybe he'll come up with a good idea one of these days."

Campuses: Budgets cut

lyst, because enrollment estimates by the state Dept. of Finance do not justify the need for any new campuses, according to an article in the Los Angeles Times.

Donna Olsson, legislative analyst for education, said that the combined CSU, UC and community college systems are $154 million short of what was requested for the proposed state budget. She also said that $14.5 million within the CSU budget was cut because there was no "rational analysis" for its existence.

She added that the proposed budget for the CSU was based on a projected enrollment increase of 7,120 full-time equivalent students (FTES).

Dean Leshner, CSU trustee since 1973, except for two years during the mid-1980s, said that every projection done by the state that he has seen has always fallen short of actual enrollment figures.

He said more minorities are coming into the state, and educational institutions should prepare for that.

"To take education to the people, you have to be prepared ... (and) have optimistic predictions to have the funds when the needs arise," Leshner said.
